

Tell Me Your Story

Thanks to the University of Minnesota for granting me a degree, and saving me from a career as a rich and famous rock star. At The U, I rode a tennis scholarship to four Big Ten titles, All-America my sophomore year, and a career-ending injury when my elbow blew up like a cheap firecracker.

So here I am in the land of enchantment where the blue sky says, "Golf Me," and every Casino's got your number.

I married a beautiful girl from Santa Fe who thinks I'm funny. I followed my mom's advice. She said marry up, and marry beautiful, because you're going to have to look at her for a long time. We have a new baby boy named Aiden. He can shoot the jumper with either hand.

Oh, and I just bought O'Neill's Uptown. Ten years learning the business the hard way, and I finally own my own place. I love Uptown. In my dreams, there was an Uptown.

Uptown is the right place for friends and family, TV sports from around the world, a lip smackin' menu, and year 'round events to make your life special—receptions, anniversaries, birthdays, testimonials, roasts, promotions, divorces, demotions, castle closings, joustings, moat openings, sports wins, club football, and best lines of the year.

My sister and I grew up in Saginaw, Michigan. We had a tennis court in the backyard. We didn't have a house. We lived on the court. We ordered out a lot. In the winter, it was really cold. Pop would hit tennis balls to us and shout, "One of these days we're all going to be fabulously poor." Then we would laugh because we knew we had already made it.

They called my mom The Terminator. She would come to my college matches wearing a long black leather coat with Hollywood shades. She would sit by herself and chain smoke until I won. Everybody thought she was packin'. Nah, she was just the first Goth.

I bought Uptown because I like to hang out with the customers, talk a little sports, and listen to how fate danced into your lives and changed your plans.

So, welcome to Kraffty's Uptown. Tell me your story. I can't wait to hear it.
